The UWRF School Psychology Program may provide up to three $150 student research grants each academic year. Research groups are eligible for one $150 grant per year. Funded grants may be used to support the completion of any required Directed Research project.

Examples of grant requests that have been funded previously include:
- Purchase of necessary data collection materials (e.g., published rating scales)
- Hire transcribing services for data collected by interview
- Pay for posting electronic surveys to association web pages
- Pay for access to mailing lists for surveys
- Purchase necessary software

This is not an exhaustive list. Other expenses may be eligible. Most research studies involve some routine expense to the researchers (e.g., mileage, photo copies or postage). Preference will be given to applications from researchers requesting unexpected expenses, unusually large expenses, or atypical expenses (e.g., not common among other student projects). To apply for a $150 stipend, respond to the following questions and return this form to the program director:

1) Briefly state your research purpose and/or research questions

2) Briefly summarize your budget (i.e., state a dollar amount requested and indicate how those funds would be spent).

3) Please explain if you believe your research expenses are unexpected, unusually large, or atypical.

These student research grants are not guaranteed. Funded grants will be determined based on program budget availability and a review of this application by the program director, with consultation from other program faculty, as needed.
