   Revised December 2012
Narrative for modifying Marketing Communications – CAFES Option

Currently, the only requirement for students majoring in Marketing Communications who want to receive their degree from the College of Agriculture, Food and Environmental Sciences is that they complete Agricultural Foundation courses. This sequence of 5 introductory courses is designed to provide students with a base-level of knowledge about agriculture.

All Marketing Communication majors are required to complete a minor. The proposed modification to the Marketing Communications – CAFES option is to require that these students complete a minor in CAFES. This will ensure that graduates of this program have more than a base-level of knowledge of the agricultural discipline of their choice.

The proposed modification to the CAFES option will not affect the Marketing Communication – CAS option.
Letters of support for proposed change to the Marketing Communications – CAFES emphasis:

Animal and Food Science Department:

Dave,

I think this makes sense, so the Department of Animal and Food Science supports the proposal to require Marketing Communication – CAFES emphasis students to complete a minor in some discipline within the College of Agriculture, Food and Environmental Sciences.

Gary Onan
Animal & Food Science Chair

Re: Proposed change to the Marketing Communications major

The Agricultural Engineering Technology Department supports the proposal to require Marketing Communication – CAFES emphasis students to complete a minor in some discipline with the College of Agriculture, Food and Environmental Sciences.

Agricultural Education Department:

David,

The agricultural Education Department supports the proposal to require a CAFES minor for all Mar Com - CAFES students.

At the same time we want to clarify the internship requirement for Mar Com - CAFES students and propose that the current language of any CAFES intern course be limited to AGEC or AGED 200/300 internship courses.
