To show proof of funding, you typically need to provide documentation that demonstrates you have sufficient funds to cover tuition, fees, and living expenses. Here is a breakdown of common ways to do this:

1. Bank Statements
 - Must be recent (usually within the last 3–6 months).
 - Should show your name or name of your sponsor(s) and a balance that meets or exceeds the total estimated amount.
 - May need to be translated and notarized if not in English.
2. Scholarship or Grant Letters
 - Official documentation from the institution or organization awarding the scholarship.
 - Should clearly state the amount and duration of the award.
3. Loan Approval Letters
 - From a recognized financial institution.
 - Must specify the amount approved and the terms.
4. Financial Guarantee Letter
 - Often used by government-sponsored students.
 - Must be on official letterhead and signed by an authorized representative.
5. Certificate of Deposit or Fixed-Term Savings
 - If funds are held in a time-bound account, documentation must show maturity date and amount.

Tips for Submission:

- Ensure all documents are clear, legible, and official.
- Convert foreign currencies to USD if required.
- Include translations if documents are not in English.
